A couple of weeks in advance before your birthday, it's about time to inform your friends about an actual date and time of your organized party. You may chose – to intrigue your guests by a tempting text message or to invite by a specially designed email.

Dear friends, when was the last time you've seen me in my pajamas? Well, OK, don't bother remembering, better come and visit me on [date and time]. I have an occasion, I have a pajamas, what I'm missing is you... only in your pajamas, too! It's gonna be crazy and fun – I promise!

While email invitation could be of the following design:

WELCOMING OF THE GUESTS

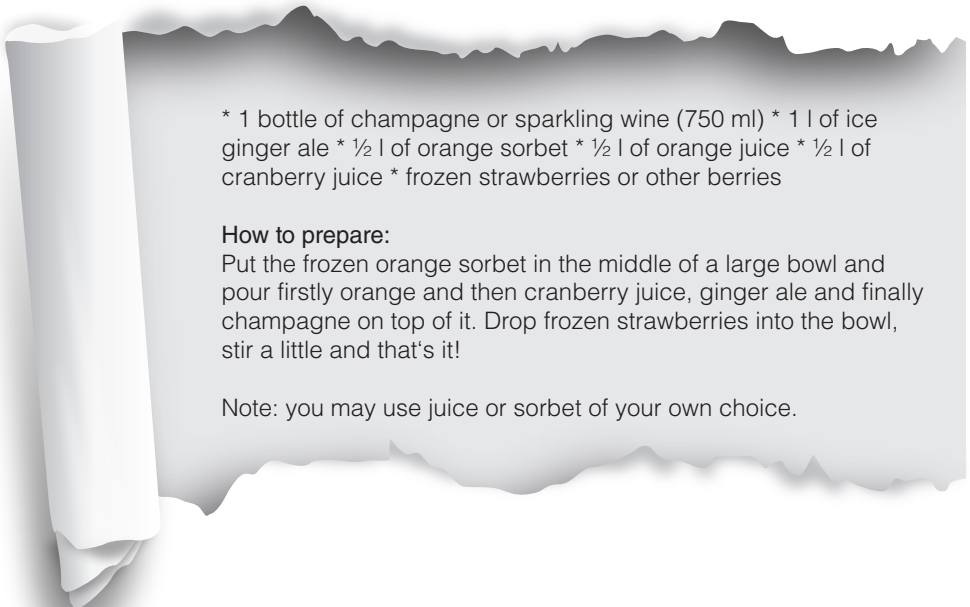

Of course, you meet your guests by wearing your best pajamas. To add more flavor of coziness, we suggest putting your hair in rollers to stress your Pajamas Party style. In the ideal world, your guests should come already wearing their pajamas and slippers, however, if there are some who are too shy to walk in such a style in the neighborhood, lead them to a dressing room where they can change into their party attire.

Your place where the party is about to begin should look very cozy: the action will take place on the couches, armchairs and even on the floor stuffed with piles of lovely cushions to make your guests sit comfortably down there. Pleasant and joyful popular music is in the air.

PROGRAM FOR THE EVENING

After all friends and relatives' happy birthday wishes and acceptance of gifts, invite your guests to the Pajama Party refreshment table. Here we find a large bowl full of popcorn, nachos with different dips, bruschettas al pomodoro and other kinds of one bites of your choice. All party guests are also offered to taste a freshly made punch from a large stylish bowl.

To prepare your punch, you will need:

* 1 bottle of champagne or sparkling wine (750 ml) * 1 l of ice ginger ale * ½ l of orange sorbet * ½ l of orange juice * ½ l of cranberry juice * frozen strawberries or other berries

How to prepare:

Put the frozen orange sorbet in the middle of a large bowl and pour firstly orange and then cranberry juice, ginger ale and finally champagne on top of it. Drop frozen strawberries into the bowl, stir a little and that's it!

Note: you may use juice or sorbet of your own choice.

When your guests have tried your treats and had some lovely conversation, don't miss an opportunity to make some original Pajamas Party photos. Thus each guest may turn into both – a photographer or a model: the camera goes round and each photographer may direct his/her own content of the photo.

And Pajamas Party is no party without a cushion fight! Thus quickly all guests are divided into two teams and the battle begins assisted by louder rhythmical beats. The task is as follows: till the song ends, each team has to throw out the cushions into the opponent's territory, and their rivals are doing the same. After the song is over, everybody counts how many cushions they have in their own territory and the team that has less is the winner. It's high time for a toast!

As everybody got the moves, they are ready for a dance rhythm – a number of Pajamas Party Disco dances will definitely be what everybody needs, and if there is also a possibility of karaoke, everybody will be engaged for sure.

Trying to calm down a bit, invite everybody to sit on the floor among the cushions and start a funny table game, e.g. „Alias“. Accordingly all refreshments move to the floor as well for all the guests to feel cozy and comfortable.

At midnight everybody sings „Happy Birthday“, drinks a glass of champagne and tries the birthday cake decorated with a certain number of candles you are willing to light on it 😊.

As this is a Pajamas Party, everybody is invited to a midnight cinema – buy or rent a recent blockbuster comedy in advance for a strong dose of laughter, which won't let your guests to fall asleep. Popcorn resources in this party are recommended to be inexhaustible.

We wish you a stunning party!
